2) Each vendor handles books differently. Any books by EBSCO, for instance, are single use only. Clinical Key and Access Medicine, by contrast, do not limit the number of people using the book at one time. For some books, the Library has physical and e-book copies.

3) Getting full-text access is not always possible, but creating a personal account helps. Below are two examples of vendors requiring personal accounts for full-text or offline reading.

a--EBSCO Requires a personal account in order for downloading of e-books to be read off line. Below is a picture of where to go (Circled in red), when creating a personal account:

b—Clinical Key requires a personal account to access book chapters not immediately available in full-text. Below is a picture of the account form, which can be accessed by clicking on the Register button circled in red below.

The image shows a web browser window displaying the Elsevier registration page. The top navigation bar contains links for Journals, Books, Practice Guidelines, Patient Education, Drugs, Multimedia, CME, Register, and Login. The 'Register' link is circled in red. The main content area is titled 'Register' and includes a brief description of the registration process. Below this, there are three main sections: 'Your details' with input fields for 'First name' and 'Family name'; 'E-mail and password' with input fields for 'E-mail address', 'Password', and 'Confirm password'; and 'Your role and field of interest'. A 'Privacy policy' link is located in the top right corner of the form area.

4) Downloading the entire book from Access Medicine or Stat!Ref, for instance, or even individual chapters is not easy. For those, try sending the chapters to your email inbox. Another option would be to copy and paste the text into a word document and convert it to a PDF. Both of these options usually take longer and it might not be worth your time.
