CLINICAL DECISIONS

INTERACTIVE AT NEJM.ORG

Mammography Screening for Breast Cancer

This interactive feature addresses the approach to a clinical issue. A case vignette is followed by specific options, none of which can be considered either correct or incorrect. In short essays, experts in the field then argue for each of the options. Readers can participate in forming community opinion by choosing one of the options and, if they like, providing their reasons.

CASE VIGNETTE

A 40-year-old woman presents to her primary care physician for a routine health maintenance examination. Overall, she has been feeling well. She takes no medications. She lives with her husband and their two children, who are 7 and 11 years of age. She underwent menarche at the age of 12. Before the birth of her first child, she took combined oral contraceptives for 6 years. She breast-fed each of her children for approximately 1 year. For the past 4 years, she has used a levonorgestrel intrauterine device for contraception. She works as an accountant and exercises on the weekends. Her diet includes regular consumption of fish, high-fiber grains, and vegetables.

OPTION 1

Recommend Screening Mammography Starting at the Age of 40

Robert A. Smith, Ph.D.

At what age should women begin breast-cancer screening, and what information can women and their clinicians use to help inform this decision? One school of thought asserts that progress in therapy has eclipsed the benefit of early detection and that harms associated with screening
