Traditional Rotating Internship

An internship is an educational program requiring extensive participation in patient care. It serves as the link between pre-doctoral and post-doctoral clinical training and provides a year of maturation and transition from application of pre-doctoral knowledge to clinical decision-making skills. The internship exposes graduates to core disciplines including Internal Medicine, Family Medicine, General Surgery, Obstetrics/Gynecology, Pediatrics, and Emergency Medicine.

A traditional rotating internship is only required of those graduates who will be completing an Option 3 residency program. Those option 3 residency programs are: Dermatology, Proctologic Surgery, and Occupational/Preventative Medicine. The graduate will have to go through the match twice, once into a traditional rotating internship and then again into the residency program.
