Mr. Cash Acknowledges His Error and is Forgiven

A MAN who has the manhood to come out frankly and unequivocally and declare that he was wrong and without justification in a given course, when he believes convinced of that fact, is not a dishonest man and his heart can usually be counted on to be in the right place, however distorted his view of things may have been, or however faulty his judgment. In this column last month we felt the painful necessity of stating to the profession that The Osteopathic Publishing Company had been mistreated by Mr. R. Carroll Cash, a former trusted employee, which compelled us to seek redress in court. To protect our name and business against unjust attack we were compelled—very much against our wishes—to publish facts which reflected upon the good name of Mr. Cash. This was done only after the company had exhausted every resource of direct appeal and mediation to convince Mr. Cash that he was at fault and could not accomplish anything but his own undoing if he should continue making reprisals and representations against the company, for which we could find prompt relief by going into court. As long as Mr. Cash would not see things as we knew he ought to, we had no alternative but to regard him as knowingly and wilfully at fault.

We now take pleasure in saying, however, that time has worked a change in Mr. Cash's views and when opinion had become a conviction with him he did what a true man always will do—admitted his mistakes, asked pardon of the aggrieved party and offered to make whatever amends he could to right a business wrong. This came as a surprise to us, after the long delay, but was none the less welcome—we as

NEW HOSPITAL AT KIRKSVILLE.

Seven Months' Post-Graduate Course Opens September 4.

$25,000 GOES INTO NEW BUILDING

Announcement Is Out for the New Post-Graduate Course at Kirksville Which Will Qualify Twenty Months' Graduates as Three-Year Osteopaths in Compliance with Laws in Many States--Course Is Strong.

The American School of Osteopathy will have a new modern hospital, handsome in design and complete in appointments, built and in operation by the time college opens in September. That is the news just received from Kirksville. From the architect's drawing of the rooms, two wards and the third year and the hospital were only prospects. Since then we have not heard much of hip-hip-hurrahing from Kirksville about "getting in the money." But the third year and the hospital has been added and the new hospital is to be built immediately. We judge that the stockholders and the city medical men will now go for money to make improvements at the "old stamping grounds."

The new Kirksville hospital will be a great advantage to the students. It will put the A. S. O. upon equality with the city medical schools for clinical facilities. It is to be a modern piece of architecture in every respect. It will be of pressed brick, trimmed with gray stone, and will be 72 feet across by 106 feet in depth, two stories and finished basement. Tiling floors in the halls and hard maple wood in the rooms and wards. Steam heat from a plant outside of the building, hot and cold water, baths and toilet rooms, with the best of sanitary plumbing and modern ventilation, telephone service, etc.

The completed building will have 40 private rooms, with private offices and reception rooms, all the treatment rooms, amphitheater, operating, sterilizing and preparation rooms for surgical cases, dining rooms, pantry and kitchen. The amphitheater will seat 400. It will be used for surgical and obstetrical clinics. Fifty to 75 patients can be accommodated at a time in this new hospital with all modern comforts and conveniences.

The new A. S. O. Hospital promises to fill a want long felt at the parent college and the

S O MANY inquiries have been raised lately as to whether Judge Toney really did enjoin the American Medical Association from making campaign use of his now celebrated decision—happily reversed as soon as the correct facts were presented—that "The O. P."

set out to chase down his honor and see if the story as widely printed was true or not.

Dr. Harry Nelson, of Louisville, Ky., only knew that no local court record was to be found to that effect and that his honor had moved to Denver after his defeat for reelection, where he is now engaged in practice.

That was a clew and Dr. N. Alden Bolles agreed to represent "The O. P." and chase down the matter. His report is appended.

"I called to-day upon Judge Sterling B. Toney and had the satisfaction of granting his request for the gift of the only copy of his famous decision I had and which had just come to me from somewhere, addressed to Dr. N. A. Bolles. There was nothing to locate it by, but I suppose it was bought by "The O. P." from that pile the American Medical Association is so desirous of "selling" out. It was a great satisfaction to gratify the judge's desire for a momento of his former relations to our practice, especially as it filled a gap left by the lack of courtesy due him from some former M. D. callers about to be mentioned.

"I found him a very affable gentleman, I suppose about 60 years of age, and quite judgy in his manners, in distributing that pamphlet, he amused me not a little by an im"
Seven Months' Post Graduate Course at A. S. O.

A seven months' post graduate course is also announced by the A. S. O. to begin September 4, 1905. This is designed to be a third year course to all regular two-year graduates of the American School and other recognized colleges. It is meant to give practitioners in conjunction with the 20-months' course which they have previously taken, the full equivalent of a three-year course of nine months each, as demanded by law in the professional society and by a number of states.

This course, while a distinct post graduate course, especially gotten up, Dr. Hamilton says, to supply the demand of practitioners in the field, will prove very convenient to fresh two-year graduates who want to qualify as 27-month graduates before entering practice.

Practical Work Foremost

From the detailed announcement just received it is evident that this post graduate course is broad in its scope and practical to a degree. Less of theory and more of practice is noticed in the layout presented than is possible to find in the old two-year course. It is evident that the experience of the A. S. O., in summing up its course work for two years past has taught its faculty that the practitioner coming back from several years' experience in the field, does not want to listen to theories spun out about obstructed nerve force and blood supply—he could shut his eyes and reason just as skillfully and as eloquently upon that line as his professors, no doubt—but he wants action, obscure diagnosis deciphered, applied anatomy, concrete demonstrations of lesions of the various classes, both direct and remote, which the professors have seen and mastered before coming to class. They want technique. They want treatment for particular cases. They want surgical diagnosis and some of the operations. They want to talk together—to crack hard nuts with their professors and fellow practitioners which they, working alone, have shaken out of the tree of experience out in the field, but failed to crack open satisfactorily. Not theory, I repeat, but practice.

From the announcements of A. S. O. about this post graduate course I judge that that is just the sort of a feast of knowledge and experience which Dean Laughlin has prepared for all comers. The new hospital being in operation at A. S. O., Moose Museum of Osteopathic Medicine, Kirksville, MO, is ready to answer questions in greater detail to all who are interested.

No Extra Fees

Tuition is $150. "No extra expenses of any kind for laboratory fees or dissection, and the student is permitted to attend all cases and operations at the hospital without extra charge." Where desired students can arrange to substitute a part in this course for equivalent work in the regular course. Dr. Warren Hamilton, of Kirksville, is ready to answer questions in greater detail to all who are interested.

Side Trips at Denver

One of the great drawing cards at Denver will be the opportunity to take "side trips" into the wild mountain fastnesses, the beautiful parks and serpentine canyons after the big meeting is over. Every doctor will want to take some of those vacation trips and the cost is so small that those who have a week extra at their disposal will want to take half a dozen of them. Many of these trips are out of Denver and back the same day, or putting within one or two days, and the rates are low to individuals and lower still to big parties. We give pictures herewith of some of these enchanting scenes to be varied by side trips and append some of the rates just to show you how cheap these side trips will be—which is another reason why you should take your vacation.

About That Nobel Vote

So many letters and personal calls at "The O. P." office have shown enthusiasm for the nomination of Dr. A. T. Still for a Nobel prize that "The O. P." has decided to issue a postal card, properly printed and addressed to "The New York Independent," with which any voter may record his ballot merely by signing his name and address and adding a one-cent stamp. We are also figuring on a sheet petition to be signed by 100 names and sent in by whoever wishes to collect ballots. Both of these will be ready in a few days, and will be furnished to the field at the bare cost of printing—which will be only a trivial cost for postals, something like 15 or 20 cents per hundred delivered. The petitions for 100 names probably 5 cents apiece. Olders will be received now and filled within a few days. Push it along, doctor. Let's give "Pap" a vote of 100,000, to show that he is recognized by his fellow countrymen whether he ever receives $30,000 of Mr. Nobel's money or not!

A TWO DOLLAR OFFER

ON AND AFTER APRIL 15, 1905, I will require $5.00 for all orders I fill. The rule will be ironclad and under no circumstances will I make any exceptions. I have recently been able to add two elements that trebled the strength of the antiseptic that had already been used with the greatest success in over 2,000 cases of skin diseases. Hence I am unable to fill any order for less than $5.00. A $5.00 course will contain eight packages from this time on instead of seven, and will last an ordinary case for six to eight weeks. The patients should be required to pay $1.00 a package in each instance.

MY SPECIAL OFFER WHICH EXPIRES APRIL 15, 1905.
GOOD FOR ANY CASE EXCEPTING ECZEMA, PSORIASIS OR ACNE.

Send me $2.00 and I will send you one quart of the antiseptic in the new strength. It can be used in any case, excepting as above, which requires an antiseptic. It is not powerful enough for the above ailments. This offer is made for those who desire to try the treatment at a nominal expense and will not be repeated. Address all orders to

Editorial Enterprise

It Was a Splendid Fight
"I am afraid our New York bill is doomed, as the delay is working against us," writes Dr. C. C. Teall, of Brooklyn. "We put up a fight, however, and have had many compliments from the statesmen on the conduct of our campaign. It will come to vote in the senate Tuesday, April 12. All our fighting squad have worked equally hard. Dr. Williams has done wonders, as have Drs. Chiles, Steele, Sands, Proctor and Hart, the latter especially. Dr. Haggard made a great talk at our last hearing, although I got quoted in the press and he did not. It was a fine argument and I deserved notice.”

I should as soon try to keep house without a broom as try to open a new practice without "Osteopathic Health."—Dr. Elizabeth Broach, Atlanta, Georgia.
Osteopaths, wherever located, have felt the need of a more convenient treatment table—one that could be adjusted in all directions. This is found alone in the "Hilo," making it the most up-to-date Osteopathic treating table ever offered the profession.

The table is of standard size and design mounted upon an artistic hydraulic base. It can be raised and lowered with ease by a slight pressure of the foot upon the lever. It has a vertical movement from twenty-four inches, the lowest point, to three feet and three inches, the highest point. It can be rotated in any desired position. It can be tilted to any angle and firmly locked. The "Hilo" base is made so it can be attached to any old-style table by removing the legs and bolting to the "Hilo" base. Buying the "Hilo" Osteopathic Treatment Table, or the base for attachment to old table, will be true economy of time, labor and money, although the first cost is greater than some other tables. No Law in New Jersey This Year

Our stalwarts in New Jersey will not get an independent Osteopathic board this year, although our measure did pass the senate March 29, only two senators voting against it. The house adjourned next day without having time to act upon the measure. Too bad. But it was a good fight, a good bill and a good victory as far as it went and we are stronger for the effort.

THE ANSWER.—Anacanda, Mont. Dear Sir: Send a sample of your microbes to kill hair.

I saw it advertised in a magazine, so I desire to have a trial of it. My face is all over hair, I have tried Modene Solution but it did not kill the hair. I desire you to send me some of your hair for microscopic examination if it proves successful I will introduce it to all and make you famous. I now have full particulars about microbes. I remain yours truly, James M. Donald.

Situation in New York

When the New York situation was reported to us last month it looked like a rout for Osteopathy in the senate judiciary committee and was so reported by us. It died a day or two, however, and before The "O. P." reached subscribers—our leaders had rallied and turned temporary disadvantage to distinct advantage, getting the senate committee to report our bill favorably by a vote of 9 to 40. Next, the assembly public health committee did likewise. A vote is expected daily. The press is very fair to us for the first time in New York. The medics claim they will get a veto should our bill pass both houses. It is getting late in the session for hopes of success, but we have made good progress with what has been accomplished.

Please with Erring Ones

Unprofessional newspaper advertising by certain members of the Greater New York Society has recently appeared, says the Bulletin of the Society issued by Dr. Evelyn K. Underwood, secretary. More than a year ago a newspaper was signed by many members not to do any newspaper advertising. The pledge was not renewed this year, as the officers left the matter entirely in the hands of each individual, depending upon the natural and mutual desire to elevate our profession. It is to be hoped that those who have made this mistake will at the matter a second consideration. We have all agreed that such action is not only detrimental to Osteopathy, but to the advertiser and his fellow practitioners as well.

Retort Osteopathic

To the Editor of the New York Sun.—Sir: The report of the hearing before the Medical pension yesterday on the bill to regulate the practice of Osteopathy states that the principal argument of the opposition was made by Dr. Robert T. Morris, of New York city, and that he created surprise by producing a cadder and challenging the Osteopaths to demonstrate thereon their practice. The argument consists in attacking the derangements of the structure of the living body. Dr. Morris may know that all functions of the body begin and cease with life. If not, let him

Greet Col. Shaw on the Coast
As many of the Osteopaths of San Francisco as could be reached with only a few hours' notice gathered at the office of Drs. Madden and Stuart Thursday evening, March 30, 1905, to meet Col. A. B. Shaw, who stopped over in San Francisco one day on his return trip to Des Moines from southern California. A pleasant evening was spent in discussion of matters pertaining to Osteopathy. Among those present were: Dr. Edie E. York, Dr. Frank L. Martin, Dr. H. L. Ivie, Dr. Agnes G. Madden, Dr. Corn S. Richard, Dr. Kate C. Slaughter, Dr. E. A. Spencer, Dr. W. C. Bailey, Dr. Mary V. Stuart, Dr. C. H. A. Davis, Dr. S. J. Davis, Dr. J. Lovell Lawrence, Dr. Henry Kirsch, Dr. S. D. Cooper, Dr. C. N. Miller, Dr. L. C. Heilbron, Dr. W. C. Bean, Dr. Margaret Harrell, and Dr. J. Witherspoon.

Stealing Osteopathic Thunder
At the Detroit College of Medicine (Mich.) they are teaching Osteopathy, but not under the name Osteopathy, but as something new which they have discovered. I also saw an article in the January 20, 1905, issue of Medical Review of Reviews (published at 616 Madison avenue, New York) with some title as "A New Method for Diagnosis of Children's Diseases." Also the Vibrator Journals contain reading matter that reads as if they had made the discovery of spinal lesions, etc.

Now I was wondering if you could get facts concerning the matter from Osteopaths of the different states and publish an article which will inform the public of such steals. The medical profession as a whole is stealing Osteopathic principles and I feel as if by combined efforts something could be done to retain our foothold. Respectfully, A. F. McWilliams, Boston, Mass.

Massachusetts Sanitarium
Not a One-Man Affair
My Dear Doctor Bunting—In the March issue of the Osteopathic Physician, in a personal sketch of myself, you refer to the Cambridge Osteopathic and Surgical Sanitarium as being "the private institution of Dr. Harris." At no time, in the most remote sense, have I alluded to the ownership of the sanitarium or implied that it was a private institution of my own. Your statement is therefore misleading and unfair to the other owners and promoters of the sanitarium. I know this misstatement is wholly an unintentional error on your part, and in justice to myself and you, I wish you to give publicity to this letter in your April issue. I was one of the promoters of the sanitarium, own some of the stock and have the honor of being resident physician and treasurer. Prominent amongst the promoters, owners, and visiting staff are to be found the names of Drs. F. K. Byrkit, J. C. Bishop, H. V. Dunsmoor, G. C. and Grace B. Taplin, Elizabeth K. Kelley, W. A. Foster, Dale E. Brown, Mr. E. M. Slagle and a number of lay citizens. Kindly favor me by giving space to this in your next issue and oblige. Yours sincerely, Sure our mutual friends of the profession and we now take sincere pleasure in stating our belief that Mr. Cash did not intend to do a wrong and that his error was wholly one of misunderstanding.

Mr. Cash's Acknowledgment

"Chicago, Ill., April 7, 1905.

"Dear Doctor Butting:

"I have come to the idea that I made a great mistake in my behavior toward you and the O. P. Company. I have felt this for some time, but have not been able to bring myself to the point of confessing that I was wrong.

"I want now to make a free and frank admission that I didn't behave toward you as I should. But I want you to know that I never was intentionally dishonest and, up to the last few weeks of our association, I served you faithfully and with a single eye to advancing your best interests.

"I have only the best of feeling for you at heart and hope the best of success for your business. I had worked very hard and didn't stand perfectly well, but I think I could explain things to you, you would not cherish any ill will toward me, or entertain any opinion adverse to your character, for I should like to begin a new business career feeling that I had your good will.

"Very truly yours,

Dr. Gid E. Johnson, of Omaha, a Good Lobbyist

Our Nebraska practitioners are feeling mighty good about the recent campaign of Dr. Gid E. Johnson, who led the fight for us at Lincoln, is coming in for a good deal of praise. Dr. Johnson is a natural born lobbyist and his long acquaintance with political conditions in Nebraska made him just the leader to cope with our enemies. He, of course, had the advantage of able colleagues, for our profession throughout the state was well worked up over the peril.

It is an open secret that Dr. Johnson is going to run for a state senate seat this fall. It is true he has been out a very long time; hence, he went into the necessary hand-shaking and wirepulling involved in our fight with a determination to get as much training as possible. He will sit in the Statehouse that so many M. D.'s in politics are seeking to down the Osteopaths that he thinks it would be a good plan for every state to have one Osteopath in the senate "just to keep an eye on things."

Success to your ambition, Dr. Johnson!

There was really excellent chance for an Osteopathic court in Nebraska before Dr. Johnson, Dr. F. M. Cram, and the rest of our lobby got busy. The medical men offered House Roll No. 165 as a strengthening of Osteopathic hopes. Then the Osteopaths got Senator Cody to offer an amendment to the old Osteopathic law passed April 1, 1901, which amendment at length became law.

"At the time our original law was passed the medical brethren did not require an examination of their own graduates in medicine, but a diploma from a regular medical school was accepted and a certificate issued," explains Dr. Johnson.

"Two years ago the medical amended their osteopathy law by the board. This amendment to our law as secured simply requires examination and also defines what a regularly chartered college of Osteopathy shall consist of. This bill passed both houses without a dissenting vote and was signed by the governor."

"Subsequently the legislature passed the medics' House Roll No. 165 with the amendments we Osteopaths demanded and which were agreed on in the medical committee exempting Osteopaths. With these Osteopathic amendments added, the legislature passed this bill March 27 and my opinion is," says Dr. Johnson, "that it really makes us a better law than our own law and its new amendment, as it takes up right into the medical profession and recognizes us as a separate and distinct school of healing and cuts out magnetic Osteopaths, magnetic healers, etc., that are infesting this state. So you see it does not matter to us which law will take precedence."

"We regard here our fight as a great victory, especially since they had come so near running a loaded bill through before our legislative committee got on to the fact that it was almost a new Osteopathic law as it takes us right into the medical profession and recognizes us as a separate and distinct school of healing and cuts out magnetic Osteopaths, magnetic healers, etc., that are infesting this state. So you see it does not matter to us which law will take precedence."

at all, although what he is doing will help him on that line later. He is simply filling his memory with names and facts and memorized relationships. He is cramming his memory full of humor, and he is using this humor for the second line. This humor shines temporarily as the smartest, while those who have the best minds and understand the reasons of things but who have poor memories are doomed to the dullards and symptomatics of those who are not memory of the department of bones, for one class of facts, in another department for muscles and still others for other tissues—a few cuts and general mechan­ical and other such things are really the tools of the whole skeleton. Those who memorize the names and facts with bones ease and quickness will often forget them the quickest.

After the bones of the head are thus “mas­tered” the bones of the other regions are taken up in similar fashion and we have been familiarized. So the muscles are taken up. Likewise the blood vessels, likewise the nerves—tissue by tissue, and finally when the “house” is nearing completion the student is supposed to begin to understand how it all is built and interrelated and why physiology puts a certain relationship between organs. Then the “dull memoried but reasonable” students be­gin to pull to the front and in physiology and pathology and therapies are they are to be ex­pected to line up close to the 100 mark.

Dr. Laughlin’s New Method

This old-fashioned way of studying anatomy is all wrong and Dr. Laughlin, from his intimate association with teaching and teaching anatomy, shows that he grasps this truth very com­pletely. He starts out to study the body, by con­trast, and his readers take up a bone—say the humerus. As soon as the general features of the bone are learned the student begins to com­prehend them by laying cartilages and ligaments upon it; next tracing the nutrient ar­teries into the bones and learning that veins in the same channels also bring the blood away. Also tracing the nerve through the channels that feel it then the student has done more than memorize mere names about the structures that pass through a given foraminae.

Next the student adjusts the straps and ropes and pulleys known as the muscles upon this bone and he learns how these move the bone upon other bones. Then he traces the blood supply that feeds these muscles. Next the nerve supply to move and nourish the muscles, and at length the skin, over the muscles and intimate­ly connected muscles and pulleys known as the muscles upon this bone. As Gray and I described some articular faet­ters, classifies and makes simple so many old-fashioned way of studying anatomy—rightfully called the “Nutshell” to study a hundred such an original and efficacious way of teaching the truth of anatomy. The illustrations are certainly fine.

It is certainly a beauty.

I believe it is going to be the very thing we Osteopathic anatomists need. Your book is full of simple thoughts, a getting down to the essentials.

The Osteopathic profession has been in need of an anatomy written along Osteopathic lines. This volume, so splendidly gotten up, is worthy the genius of the author. It certainly will be appreciated by the profession.

Fairness! Freedom! Fearlessness!

EDITORIAL.

"How to the line, let chips fall where they will."

This will Be the Last Issue of "The O. P."

for you, doctor, if you are among those who have been receiving it for some months past as a cornerstone and have not yet taken the trouble to send 50 cents to indicate that you want to be considered as a regular subscriber.

With this April number we beg to say we shall cut off everybody who falls within this class, and if you are among these, you will not receive another free copy until some time after our big Denver meeting.

If reading "The O. P." has gotten to be a habit with you, doctor, and you want to keep it up, believe us, there is just one way to do it—pay for it.

If the amount of literature "The O. P. Co. has contributed to the cause of organizing and unifying the osteopathic profession has led you to suppose that it would be received by you for nothing, please permit us to correct that impression. It is 50 cents per annum in advance. Would you prefer to pay that price—even if it is hard to raise so much money—and receive it nice little pocket-size printed report of the annual meetings, well condensed, including the constitution and by-laws of the leading centers of the society. An excellent plan, surely.

There are enough sensible, thinking, educated people in the osteopathic profession who believe Dr. A. T. Still entitled to a Nobel prize to set the editor of the New York Independent thinking, whether the committee of award in Sweden will hear their plea or not.

Distrust Hand-Outs

When the wily M. D. proposes a patchwork of peace and a place for Osteopathy in the state medical board, tell him, like the Tropics of ed, we fear the Greeks bearing gifts.

Time to Bid for Hay Fever Cases

Osteopathic literature of just the right sort for curing hay fever will be found in the carefully written article on hay fever, as May, June and July are the proper time to have this malady under treatment.

Dr. Henry Beates Still Busy

Our old friend, Dr. Henry Beates, of the County Medical society, was down to Harrisburg, Pa., April 4, trying to defeat our bill.

Thanking the ruling from the House, which is well worth studying attention by every practitioner. It emphasizes that seeds have to be well planted to bear fruit.

X-Rays on Bigotry

The editor will pay his respects to the Lamboiler, because it has, so frequent ly by the graduates of Kirkville toward grad uates of other schools in the May number of the "O. P."

You may not like it, doctor, but still you ought to miss reading it. It will deal with plain facts that the profession ought to consider.

Here Is Where Some Get Off

A certain list of delinquent subscribers who have not paid any attention to notices or ar rears and personal letters are respectfully notified that they are worth more to them than 50 cents a year they have the chance to signify it rapidly. Our list of delinquents will be weed out before the May number and those in arrears will not receive next month's copy. A red star on the editorial margin of this number tells you that this means you.

Medicine As a Business Proposition

We will begin a serial in an early number entitled "Medicine as a Business Proposition," from the pen of Dr. Frank Lyeidston, M. D., of Chicago, the best of the Laudas, and one of the most thorough, practical and standard text books on venereal diseases and teacher at the P. & S. college. It is a very luminous satire on professional Pharisaism, is piquant with wit and candor, and gets at the economics of modern medical practice in a way to make the average doctor laugh at his own self-indulgence. Every one buy it and we may profit much as a profession from taking pointers from these frank confessions of an M. D. who knows what he is writing about.

Shame on the American Medical Association.

What a lot of pirates against humanity these pill doctors, are anyhow! One need not inquire into their means of livelihood or all to be convinced how unscrupulous, dishonest and untrustworthy they are. Just look at the use the American Medical Association has made the past few years of this so-called decision of Judge Toney after the profession knew it had been stifled by a higher court and after the M. D. knew it did not reflect the spirit of the opinions today. In commerce men who work such sharp practices are called "crooks." Shall we pass the term without, that we do not see up the actions of the leading officials and agents of the profession of regular medicine?

Establishing Legitimacy

The Osteopathic profession was first to draw a sharp line of differentiation between serving accredited osteopathic physicians and faiths. It was first to promulgate and live up to the doctrine that accredited graduates should not be served to practitioners not graduates of legitimate osteopathic schools and not entitled to membership in state societies. It has now added the ruling that accredited graduates who discredit themselves by disruptive practices must be put under the same ban of ostracism. We accepted the ruling from the House, which is well worth studying attention by every practitioner. It emphasizes that seeds have to be well planted to bear fruit.

Dr. Hildreth Will Review Legislative Lessons in May

St. Louis, March 6.

My Dear Doctor and Friend—Your letter re questing an opinion from me upon the results and lessons from the winter's battles for legislation just received. Permit me to say in reply that I would be very impossible for me, in the brief space of time which you have given me, to answer you as I feel you should be answered. But if you will give me until your next issue I will do that for you. It is hard to furnish you with some facts that seem to me to be of very great importance to our profession at this time. I can furnish you with some technical and practical lessons—valuable almost beyond our comprehension, if only understood and utilized as they should be. There is nothing in our record to discourage us, but much that we should study.

and understand if we wish to profit by our experience in the future. It certainly makes one thing plain and that is: If we wish to win the respect of the profession we must be united, unswerving front. We must outline our course and shape our policy beforehand and then stand like men, shoulder to shoulder, battling as old for the one sole principle that has made us—eternal truth and Osteopathy uncondi-terated! When we do this we need not fear the future. Yet it is well to profit by experience in order to strengthen ourselves for the future.

Doctor Bunting, I congratulate you and the profession upon the stand your paper has taken for legislation and the independent Osteopathic boards. While we may have to struggle for years to secure such legislation in all the states, yet it is the right and just way to solve our besetting problems and in the end must win if we only do our duty. Now, Doctor, if my opinion is desired more in detail in your next numbers upon the subject proposed in your last letter I will be glad to comply with your request as best I can. Assuring you of my regards, I am very respectfully yours,

A. G. HILDBRETH.

Complaint Regarding the Associated Press

I object on several counts to the way the Associated Press handled the recent report of the Goldie Granger case against Dr. C. E. G. and the way the newspapers played up the telegraphic item. Whether intended or not it was done in a way to misrepresent and injure Osteopathy. Yet it is well to profit by experience in order to strengthen ourselves for the future.

Physicians of all schools are liable for malpractice, but had it been an M. D. who was defendant in such a suit the headlines would not have read "Against the Medical Profession" (St. Joseph News and Press), as well as many other newspapers, played it up, giving the impression that it was a decision against the Osteopathic profession—but the heading would have read merely: "Against Dr. So-and-So."

Also, this is the first case of the sort in the courts, and the courts have not yet decided it to be malpractice! The much-heralded "decision" was, after all, only a remanding back of the case for new trial, and was merely a technical ruling, not passing in any way upon the merits of the case!

We have a special law in Missouri that recognizes us as "Doctors of Osteopathy," not "Bone setters," and yet the newspapers play the item up, giving the impression that it was a decision against the Osteopathic profession—but the heading would have read merely: "Against Dr. So-and-So."

Also, this is the first case of the sort in the courts, and the courts have not yet decided it to be malpractice! The much-heralded "decision" was, after all, only a remanding back of the case for new trial, and was merely a technical ruling, not passing in any way upon the merits of the case!

The court construes laws. Our right are defined by law. There was, further, no excuse for stating that Osteopaths are responsible under the law for their acts if they pretend to treat disease. All people are responsible to the law except idiots and the insane.

This criticism is not aimed at the judges of the supreme court of Missouri but at the slow-only sort of journalism in the daily press and its telegraphic service which occasionally through ordinary nervousness of the pressman and great damage to a cause that is deserving of exact justice.

M. J. BEETS, D. O.

Watch for the Wolf Under Your Coat

"The O. P." preaches the doctrine of loving our brother. We know that some have found, as I do, that they act according to the letter and spirit of their own excellent ethics—which, we believe, a real majority of them happily do.

But some do not.

clining practices—in misrepresenting our science and profession; slinging mud; concocting schemes to waylay and embarrass Osteopaths if inadequate provisions of archaic statutes will authorize a legal cause to do so. These are the greedy win the "regulars" to appearing as the true and only, saying stupid things of us, and, if our good robust sense didn't enable us to know better, we would be apt to think the whole profession of "regulars" a pack of wolves seeking whom they may devour, especially patients and Osteopaths. These zealots get into control of medical societies and publications, very often, and again exaggerate their numerical and professional strength—but still we know they misrepresent and belie the representative, courteous, fair-

minded rank-and-file of medicine whom we know

Efficacy in Your Educational Campaign

It is not all done for you, doctor, when publishers furnish you a really effective field paper edited in popular vein to serve as the siege guns for your personal campaign of education. It is then half done only. The rest is up to you. You are to point these guns at the right spots and to set off the scheduled fusillades in each succeeding month by the bombs of enlightenment, heavy shot of conviction, will drop just where they will have the most telling effect and make you new patronage.

Put up a bill at your office, or mailed out to a poorly selected list, full of erroneous names and addresses, is not the use of literature that will make you money on the investments. Would you expect to hit as many birds if you shot your gun off aimlessly into the sky as if you took deliberate aim at a covey? Of course not. If you were a game-man, carverizing for trade, would you mail communications to just anybody? Of course not.

Do you mail out your field literature to the same names year after year, or do you cut out those whom you believe knowledge, progressive ideas and drugless medicine will make the least appeal to.

If you practice in a small place, there is but one thing to do: you down the name of each well-to-do family in town and the adjacent country side, or suburban villages. If you find this list exceeds 100, or whatever greater number of magazine publishers can be cut out, then occasionally some one admits it in correspondence. That is not the way to spend your money, doctor. Make every penny effec tive; as you can by putting the least appeal to. Make up your list with extreme care in the first place.

If you practice in a large city, there is but one thing to do: you down the name of each of those whom you love to have, for you have been dispossessed of. You could never supplant the "regular" and the homeopath as "the old family doctor" if you did not have something very much better to help you down by well as harmless to offer; and it is by impressing just these facts upon the mother of the household that will find it easier to sideline her and go after the mother of the household every time. Not only is she apt to be more nectarly than the rest, but she will control the boys and girls and the head of the house, as well as the grandparents and neighbors, if you once get her started working for you.

In large cities pick out your list according to some system; the families of your church, clubs and neighborhood are a good combination; or you can use the telephone book, or blue book, and add to your literature to a class house prosperity, for those who can afford a telephone in their homes are likely to be able to retain physicians.

In every town and city there are certain individuals who ought to receive the best field magazine right along because their respect and good will is something that you ought to say that their enthusiastic advocacy—which will often be forthcoming—will do much for the local practitioner. Such persons are editors of local papers, judges and mayors, bankers, lawyers, teachers of music, teachers of music, teachers of housing and innkeepers, clergymen, dentists, leaders in club work, men and women known to be advanced thinkers, retired counselors, who can receive to the polite apology their complaints, dressmakers and hairdressers, manicurists, chiropractors, etc., etc. One need only spend a little time thinking about the men

Chivalry and the Professional Spirit

Chivalry in professional practice is not made, but it is bred, by the every-day gentleman in social life and business. It is better for the man himself, always and under all circumstances to be a gentleman—selfishly for him, mind you, if he will only realize it.

Men lose nothing by being considerate, deferential, solicitous and helpful in their relations toward others. In the professional world, however, she is met—society not more than in business and professional competition. Man can really help woman wherever and however she is, in her professional struggles, and usually with slight inconvenience to himself, too, but in return be sure that woman's associations will help man even in larger degree. She will refine, dignify, polish—in a word, "civilize" him.

How many of our men Osteopaths would revolt to barter thus with the women D. O.'s? giving them all of the help, counsel and encouragement they need, in return for the assistance that woman's professional friendship would surround her with. Osteopaths on the profession would give them constant "tips" about how to meet and diplomatically handle their women patients, how women and children like to be treated, opening the treatment they have aversion for, and what sort of treatment gets best results in women's diseases. This is only a hint of the kindness that should be due to professional gallantry. You see, I put chivalry on a buy-and-sell basis here. I am arguing that no man Osteopath can afford to dispense with gallantry, his own selfish accommodations in his relations with his sister Osteopaths—if he fortunately has any of them available.

I am not talking to the man who asks no way of women as a form of admission with his being gallant. I wish to point out to the woman who regards the woman D. O. as his competitor, and who tries to ignore, discourage and freeze her out of his community, that he is doing a great wrong, first, against himself—and such a man will always desire to consider himself first; next, to the poor girl, and, last, to the profession which to both belong.

"But there are no such men in our profession, oh yes there are—lots of them. Believe me, I know some personally. I knew some back in college. And the dear girls write me occasionally and tell me all about their misfortunes at having to dwell at close quarters with one or more "brother" Osteopaths who will not exchange experiences and hobnob professionally—not to say exchanging assistance and courtesies. Yet what is the situation? These two Osteopaths here that I would have nothing to do with each other, hating from different schools and earring each other's work with jealous distrust and suspicion. Can you not, Dr. Bunting, say something that will help the man to consider himself first; that he is doing a great wrong, first, against himself—and such a man will always desire to consider himself first; last, to the profession which to both belong."

Is it not enough that the gentlemanly M. D. finds it incumbent upon lordly professional dignity even in his daily life, and that he would not speak to the woman D. O.—God bless her for her martyrdom and troubles!—without her nearest male professional colleague throwing dirt at her and making her feel that her life work has marred her fast on a desert island where professional sympathy is not to be excepted when she is privileged to attend the state and national society meetings?

Sister Osteopaths—how many of you have met with the proposition to give Nature a chance at it all frequent? Let us hope not, for the sake of chivalry; but in proof that it does exist somewhere, and to a lamentable degree, I have just been accused of being such. A few letters I have been asked by women who I have recently received without giving names. No, this is the only case on record. Many of the sisters write the editor when they are in trouble and I am convinced from their stories that gallantry is by no means as universally found among our men as it really ought to be. Here is one evidence of it—not written for publication.

"Dear Dr. Bunting: I have often wished to say to you in confidence that Osteopathic practice is an experience to be enjoyed sometimes, or might be always, if its practitioners would only let it be. I wonder if others experience the same bitterness that I do. As the only woman in our little town I have no one to talk it over with, and I have been driven away long ago were there any such words 'as give up' in my vocabulary.

"Oh, I feel so much alone here—yet we Osteopaths number three, and it is not a large town either. I wonder if this professional jealousy prevails everywhere? We could have such pleasant times, too, and might do one another so much good, talking over cases, exchanging experiences and hobnobbing professionally—not to say exchanging assistance and courtesies. Yet what is the situation? These two and the D. O. will have nothing to do with each other, hating from different schools and earring each other's work with jealous distrust and suspicion. Can you not, Dr. Bunting, say something that will help the man to consider himself first; that he is doing a great wrong, first, against himself—and such a man will always desire to consider himself first; last, to the profession which to both belong."

Now who will say, after reading such a heart-pleasing as that, that some men are not entirely wanting in gallantry and professional and fraternal spirit? But there are no such men as those under consideration here. Osteopath paths should be so selfish, small and stupid! If the eyes of these two men fall upon this page I hope they will take these words to heart and resolved upon whether in their thought, word or deed that they try to barter thus for Nature a chance at all. Nothing to do with the profession will I say to you in confidence that Osteopathic practice is an experience to be enjoyed sometimes, or might be always, if its practitioners would only let it be. I wonder if others experience the same bitterness that I do. As the only woman in our little town I have no one to talk it over with, and I have been driven away long ago were there any such words as 'as give up' in my vocabulary.

"Oh, I feel so much alone here—yet we Osteopaths number three, and it is not a large town either. I wonder if this professional jealousy prevails everywhere? Another poor girl in trouble wrote us:

"Dear O. P.: At our recent state convention all the women D. O.'s and you there are as capable women practitioners in this state as in others where I notice at least one office is usually filled by a woman. They gave us some ideas—oh, so good and so true. But they are not in our tiresome paths are not facing them in the same city and state societies and the A. O. A. abundantly at test. Why, we have even found sweethearts and husbands for some of them—yes, many of them; and where love comes in, gallantry is bound to follow—wholly, completely, for no fellow wants to throw the race for favor by being boorish when he sees some other chap trying bravely. We are all such creatures of imitation.

Next month I propose to talk on the little-ness of grown-up Osteopath men and women sharing in the professional and fraternal spirit—than with King Death—being so childlike and simple as to hold up differences of alma mater as sufficient grounds for mutual distrust, prejudice, jealousy and enmity, and quite foolishly thinking that a diploma and its gold seal is superior to manhood and womanhood, to character, brains, intellect and accomplishments of man or woman. Be sure and read it, doctor. It will doubtless describe somebody you know.

JE. EDITOR.

May O. H. Shows High Art

HE May issue of "Osteopathic Health" is regarded by the editor as adequate to the needs of the most capricious field. In one respect, it may be said with truth that practically every line has been written by him. In another sense it is a well-rounded number, full of general interest, including some subjects that have not received much notice hitherto.

It is distinctive of this number that it tells the osteopathic story without seeming to tell it. The lesson we wish to have the public learn is written entirely between the lines. The pubhe will read of one thing and another full of every-day life and love and professional spirit; and when he is through he will have a very fair conception about Osteopathy. That's what the editor means by calling it a "high art" number.

"Breaking a Fever" is something that almost every person would be glad to read of if he had a chance. It is instructive and shows that fever is something more than "high temperature." It explains how it is very mch a disarrangement of gland-work—a stopping of secretion processes in various glands that help to keep the body. It is not a pity that any Osteopath should do more than he can, to keep the body fireside interest just as he might in the newspapers, but when he is through he will have a very fair conception about Osteopathy. That's what the editor means by calling it a "high art" number.

How many of them now say, "Osteopathy may be all right in spine disease, but what can you do with a fever?"

This May number tells them: Now is the time to treat hayfever—May and June are the burden of another number, too, and might do one another so much good, talking over cases, exchanging experiences and hobnobbing professionally—not to say exchanging assistance and courtesies. Yet what is the situation? These two and the D. O. will have nothing to do with each other, hating from different schools and earring each other's work with jealous distrust and suspicion. Can you not, Dr. Bunting, say something that will help the man to consider himself first; that he is doing a great wrong, first, against himself—and such a man will always desire to consider himself first; last, to the profession which to both belong.

"Anemia in Young Girls" is a simple recital for the benefit of mothers of a very common malady which is an annoying factor at many a fireside. They assure them that Osteopathy cures simple anemia as a usual thing. This article, we believe, will also appeal to parents, as it is another menace of sickly, nervous children that can be readily checked by Osteopathy.

"Hay Fever More Than Pollenphobia." There are 30,000 men and women in the United States who consult this sketch, and who will—if they get the chance.

APRIL

Shoovers Good Things for Field and Table Literature in the well-groomed pages of “Osteopathic Health.” Every month contains its thrilling paragraphs, its human interest, its heroic and interesting narratives. The whole is polished off with editorial originality.

How I Came to Be an Osteopath, by Dr. A. T. Still.

It is one of our revered founder’s messages that comes straight from his heart and carries certain conviction. It is strong, dignified, impressive and interesting.

Stomach Troubles, by Ralph Kendrick Smith, of Boston, is a good article on a subject we cannot make too plain or explain too often, since so many people have disorders of digestive organs.

Pain in the Coccyx, is something from the Editor’s “Crump.” He considers them both useful in explaining Osteopathy and interesting new patients.

“A Letter to a Masseur,”

“Broken Nocks Repaired,”

“Women in Osteopathy,”

and other interesting articles round out a very fascinating number.

What will your order be? Ready to fill orders March 25th. Watch for sample.
