Our Platform
By Our Beloved Founder, Dr. Andrew Taylor Still

It should be known where osteopathy stands and what it stands for. A political party has a platform that all may know its position in regard to matters of public importance, what it stands for and what principles it advocates. The osteopath should make his position just as clear to the public. He should let the public know, in his platform, what he advocates in his campaign against disease. Our position can be tersely stated in the following planks:

First
We believe in sanitation and hygiene.

Second
We are opposed to the use of drugs as remedial agencies.

Third
We are opposed to vaccination.

Fourth
We are opposed to the use of serums in the treatment of diseases. Nature furnishes its own serum if we know how to deliver them.

Fifth
We realize that many cases require surgical treatment and therefore advocate it as a last resort. We believe many surgical operations are unnecessarily performed and that many operations can be avoided by osteopathic treatment.

Sixth
The osteopath does not depend on electricity, X-radiance, hydrotherapy, or other adjuncts, but relies on osteopathic measures in the treatment of disease.

Seventh
We have a friendly feeling for other non-drug natural methods of healing, but we do not incorporate any other methods into our system. We are opposed to drugs; in that respect at least, all natural, unharmful methods occupy the same ground. The fundamental principles of osteopathy are different from those of any other system and the cause of disease is considered from one standpoint, viz: Disease is the result of anatomical abnormalities followed by physiological discord. To cure disease the abnormal parts must be adjusted to the normal; therefore other methods that are entirely different in principle have no place in the osteopathic system.

Eighth
Osteopathy is an independent system and can be applied to all conditions of disease, including purely surgical cases, and in these cases surgery is but a branch of osteopathy.

Ninth
We believe that our therapeutic house is just large enough for osteopathy and that when other methods are brought in just that much of osteopathy must move out.

OTTARI
AN INSTITUTION FOR THE OSTEOPATHIC CARE OF NON-COMMUNICABLE DISEASES
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Dear Doctor,

Throughout all OTTARI advertising we have tried to avoid the superlative, but some facts will admit of no degree of expression. For instance:

The CLIMATE of Asheville is unsurpassed, being mild yet invigorating—a mid-winter climate in winter, in summer never oppressively warm—blankets required every night.

The SCENERY—just a part of Switzerland in America—mountains 3,100 feet high within a half mile, 6,711 feet high 28 miles distant.

The SURROUNDINGS—ideal, combining the quiet of the country with the conveniences of a cosmopolitan city 15 minutes away.

The BUILDINGS—designed from an aggregate of over forty years' experience—not an old residence or institution remodeled; built for the business without regard to cost of furnishings or equipment.

The CARE—osteopathic to the core.

The RATES—not adjusted to profits, so smallly is paid to the management, all surplus goes as an endowment fund to Research Institute.

The Perpetuation of Osteopathy

H. B. BURTON, D. O.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

The above title has a double meaning:
First, the continuance of the truth as laid down by A. T. Still and applied to the etiology of disease and the means he made use of to maintain health and prevent human ailments. Second, the continuity of the publication of the monthly magazine called, "Osteopathic Truth," devoted to the A. T. Still Ide of Osteopathy.

We have heard so much of the so-called Osteopathy that many have lost sight of Osteopathic fundamentals and need to be reminded of the truth at least monthly and then and now to bring them back to their senses and to inspire them with a desired confidence in Osteopathic truth.

Osteopathy is just as wonderful today as it was twenty years ago and Osteopathy practiced now is as then is securing the same marvelous, almost miraculous, results. The truth given us by Dr. Still and his methods of applying it to the practice of the healing art must be received in its purity. There is no reason to discover the progress of Osteopathy and upon us depends the benefit the world will get from Dr. Still's life and work.

It does not follow that Osteopathy is not a progressive science. He who is not progressive is not a true follower of Dr. Still. But is what field shall we progress? Shall we devote our energies to the cultivation of the virgin soil of the healing art or shall we steal into the long since promulgated by the old medical profession? The answer will depend upon our ideals and our faith. If we have a 100 per cent strength of Osteopathy as the A. T. Still brand we can easily perpetuate Osteopathy in its purity; but if it is as much as 50 per cent or even less inutility, pass the falsehoods on.

The entire medical world is alive and awake to know the what and the why of every possible condition interfering with normal health, but unbelievably greatest benefit was wrought and the most far-reaching accomplishment heaped on the table to help the masses whereby and wherewith he is positively not Osteopathic; he is an Osteopathic doctor.

Just to prove that long and frequent attention to the principle of healthy nutrition, as firmly implanted in his mind, together with the ever-present and ever-presenting opportunities for doing it, can result in its being carried out, I refer to "Our Platforms" on the front page and to the articles written by those who are exercising it, in the forms in which they are expressed, because they are expressions of an exact science. "The same yesterday, to-day, and forever," is the best interpretation of it at this very moment.

Many of the friends of healthy phlebitism have many been arranged, with the purpose of securing a closer personal relationship with the patients, because they are expressions of an exact science. "The same yesterday, to-day, and forever," is the best interpretation of it at this very moment.

Of course, medicine is not a science as many would say. It is a craft, with medicine as a craft, the practice is gradual to reveal all things and that the profession is looking forward to by the best methods for insuring the excellence of our colleges; all those and many more of vital questions must be considered and decided at this meeting.

Our national organization is rapidly reaching toward the light of a closer association with the various state societies, without which both motion must always occur. Every member has a direct personal interest in each such development, because a member must eventually sink or swim with the fortunes of the nation. Without proper organization, we are lost; with it, we can supply the world with an intelligent therapy based upon the latest developments in the field of science.

None of us is stronger or bigger than the parent body, not only with our close cooperation, but the sectional association hold its highest destiny. Constructive duty calls strongly toward the Boston meeting, a meeting which will pass into history as perhaps the most important ever held. Come and do your bit for the better and bigger organization, a victory for all, but one in which the new student body sufficient to carry our colleges through the cloudy present era as expending failure. Lastly, the SOCIAL FEATURES: A Reception Committee of sixty members, under the Chairmanship of Dr. Edith S. Cave, is now ready to have them join us to free the individual who has thrown a few thousand handy boys with the blue uniform, and ready to have them join us to free the class in acute work, properly nursed, fed, and exercised. I assure the element of highest efficiency, surgery is overdone. All good surgeons agree, and ready to have them join us to free the class in acute work, properly nursed, fed, and exercised. I assure the element of the embryo D. O. for we know most of them. Let us all line up to our principles and show the world that we can supply the world with an intelligent therapy based upon the latest developments in the field of science.
The International School
Dr. Louisa A. Griffen, Boulder, Colo.

All our Osteopathic journals contain appeals from the A. O. A. for help to put through a bill, now before a Comgressional committee. We are told the right to treat the sick and wounded in the various cantonments here, and at the war front in France. We glory in this great effort, not only for the recognition that such a bill would command, but for the splendid fact that the great value osteopathy would be to the country.

The question naturally arises, why do we wish to be represented on the medical corps of our country as Osteopaths? It is because we believe that as a profession we have arrived at a place in advance of the medical ideas, and where our school of practice can do what the so-called "regular school" cannot do.

And because we believe this we are willing to make a supreme effort for the official right to a place on the army and navy medical corps.

Is it not the fact we know that Osteopathy can do what the regular school cannot do? It is because we know that the basic principle of the "Old Doctor" given us is a practical working guide. It will accomplish the same work of health and well-being, it has already accomplished it again and again and we have proved it also.

We know that Osteopathy can handle a case of pneumonia more quickly and safely than our old school of practitioners. They know it too, hence their opposition.

We know that Osteopathy can bring back to normal the various tissue mal-occlusions that result from poisoning, nervous and physical strain the men of the army are under.

The principle of adjustment is right. It has brought and will bring results if correctly applied.

Osteopathy stands in the public mind today as a method of treatment that gives results and here its practitioners have an exceptional opportunity.

We have to admit, however, that this favorable attitude of the public is due to the fact that now the early A. T. Still Osteopaths who practically knew nothing of curative methods except osteopathy the "Old Doctor" taught them.

This brings the case why there are so many heterodox Osteopaths who, while posing as Osteopaths and gaining their own in popularity by working on the public to use and advocate the old school fallacies which today are and tomorrow are not.

One cannot attend state or county convention that one does not have to listen to the dissertation of some heterdox Osteopath who fails to show that his success depends not on his osteopathic work so much as on the adjuncts and medical aids he uses.

I attended a meeting recently where a heterodox Osteopath talking on the subject of the tonsils after telling what osteopathy could and do proclaim the virtues of surgery. But in referring to the finger surgery, he said he had his medical reputation, are we going to be ashamed to use the Osteopathy the "Old Doc-

He is only one of the many heterodox Osteopaths, and I refer to him because of his unusual opportunity to influence insidiously against pure osteopathy, who unfortunately have an influence on the public through his狀cial prestige, without a firm foundation osteopathic foundation just starting out to penetrate.

A versatile practitioner with apparent success holding an M. D. degree has a great influence with such a deviation from osteopathy.

The future of osteopathy rests on just one thing and that is a school under the direction of the true practitioners where Osteopathy will be taught in its purity and where the student cannot graduate without a working knowledge of its efficiency. A school where Osteopathy is its keynote and the enthusiasm of the student. In fact "The International School" the dream of the "Old Doctor." Shall we make his dream a reality?

The "CHIRO" situation
It requires no psychologist to gather from the present situation that one can see the inevitable tendency in the days, that the Chiropractic propaganda, particularly their organized Defense Pool, as headed by lawyer, Masri and Hartwell of La Croix, Wis., are not having the best possible time these days.

The attorneys for the Defense Pool have been kept chasing across the country defending their organization that such is able to support this bill and any other bill that makes for the advancement of pure osteopathy and the practice of the brilliancy of this gem of truth.

While we cannot hope to change the heterodox Osteopathy back to orthodox we can make a strong effort to

The Spurious and the Bastard Osteopath

By SIMON PURE

They tell me there is a bird that plays a song, and that bird is called a "honey-dripper" and its name is "D. O." as this particular bird sounds out in its voice. This bird has a nest in a certain place, and it is called a "D. O." nest. This nest is located in a certain city, and it is called "D. O." city. This city is a place where many birds of this species live, and they are known as "D. O." birds.

In a land of "unlimited" and strictly in advance and Nose and Throat Technique, June O.-M. you Because AND student imrwIi­ the D. which he camouflages successfully Surgi­D. degree. He does not need "Loop" at Chicago. He works eight ilie Andrew knew D. A double title or de­pre­ been tossed stili'er not seb; I shall have to drop my birds, .love is M. Reactionary papers on hydrotherapy before the local patients referred to him by the pro­with lots of water and drugs, a mini­osteopathy was bringing home osteopathy and glories that his superiorities and a incorrigible farmer, and from "grassy branches," he says and morfht that my group of a principle was no pazy that I fell down, not that the principle failed. That is the difference between a bastard and a simon-pure. A bastard osteopath tries to prostitute to principle to hide his own weakness, the simon-pure sees the limit to his own human skill and intelligence—but be­ing a true D. O.

That's what Jove Andrew said D. O. is all but a child of the sea, and maybe he found Jove Andrew wrong. By giving to his child the environment and the nourishment they need will they be able to grow up and become useful to mankind. Without this nourishment the child will remain weak and helpless. This nourishment will be obtained through the environment and the nourishment that we give them in the home.

MANHOOD IN OSTEOPATHY

Some D. O.'s have a holy terror but there are a few D. O.'s who are interested in their public no more than "bone-setter," a specialist good only for some things. They have a notion that osteopathy is the practice of a man and that they want to practice osteopathy. They are not interested in the education of the public to understand the science of osteopathy. They are interested only in their own advancement and not in the advancement of the public.

What has all this got to do with the manhood of Osteopathy? It has all to do with the education of the public to understand the science of osteopathy. The public must be taught that osteopathy is not just a way of earning a living, but a way of helping others.

The manhood of Jove Andrew's child was not broad enough to swallow up in his pride of broader (?). He never saw a hypodermic needle, a skeleton and tell him the principles of medicine and he will show out of his mouth behind that skeleton. He can't do it. He has no principles. The bastard osteopath is the only one with principles. He wants to practice osteopathy, but he has no principles. He is not interested in the advancement of the public to understand the science of osteopathy. He is interested only in his own advancement and not in the advancement of the public.
Osteopathy has been the forer of unknown organized effort. Every harm­ f ul influence has come from some sources
where good of dollars was the motto.
I know one D. O. who gave one-fourth of his time in one year to getting mas­ sioned in Osteopathy. And, besides his time, he put over four thousand dollars of what he made in the other three­ f ourths into the cause.
A bunch of men and women whose names are never published are putting up hundreds of dollars for a sheet called Truth to put manhood in Osteopathy.
Our A. O. A. Secretary has given up thousands of dollars he could have earned more easily in practice because he heard the appeal of others to help put manhood in Osteopathy.
Manhood will come to Osteopathy only when Osteopathy—not drugs and surgery—is put into curve.

Since space in Osteopathic Truth is limited, I shall give only the facts as we have proven them by treatment. For the proving of the poisonings
I have used in the sense of food poisoning.
You may be interested to know how this treatment came to our knowledge, conse­quently I will explain it at this time.
We had a patient suffering from eating fish,
she was seized with vomiting,
diarrhoea, extreme pain, and moder­ate temperature.
We treated her osteopathically and gave cinnamon to cleanse the bowels.
She was in bed two days, then she seemed better, and was obliged to be up and about. She would be fairly well
when eating lighty, but the ordinary
diet of quantities of food would cause pain
and diarrhoea. She would be fairly well
when eating lighty, but the ordinary
diet of quantities of food would cause pain
and diarrhoea. This continued for several weeks, and she vacated our brains to find something to cure her.
Dr. Still had always told us that we would find every remedy needed in Nature, if we decided to try the triumvirate, using the acid fruits first. Lemons were used, the patient ate two lemon oranges
at one sitting and her condition improved and vomiting was pitiful to be­hold.
From these results we knew we were on the wrong track, and then went to the other extremes with the non-acid fruits, and had her eat three pears (as it was in the pear season). She soon went to sleep and awakened later free from pain. In two hours we repeated with three more pears and on until she had eaten only three. The pain was all gone in one day and the next day
she was put on a milk diet, then to the regular diet, and she was entirely well from that on.
We have used the pear feeding
for every ease of even suspected pelvic poisoning, one with never a failure.
As yet we have not used it with infants,
but we are going to experiment with the pear juice in the near future.
It will give the desired effect with children
old enough to chew food, and there are no after effects except those of normal health.
We have found that the people who have become susceptible to ptomain from having repeated attacks became almost immune by eating pears occa­sionally.
We have used the pear feeding
with Osteopathic non-corrective and corrective treatment with no stoma. For patients who were passed blood with the stools, and had them back to their work in two days.

The method we have adopted is to have the patient abstain from food, and not two medium pears with skins re­moved (if in season), if not, caused the same symptoms. The patient were eaten two more, and so on until a diastasis has been consumed.

We found one Osteopathic treatment is sufficient, with rest according to the severity of the case. Many patients are never off duty if taken early. If there is severe vomiting, give smaller feeding of a pears at times, but keep feeding them,
even if the first are regurgitated.
The deductions arrived at are that the poisonous alkaloids of the pears
are neutralized by the malic acid, CEO, and other chemicals contained in the pear, and Nature soon completes a cure.

Banks under state regulations, which people who are interested in osteopathy may or near filling, but, bless our hearts, prohibit its publication in your paper. The second cause of my reluctancy comes from the fact that certain forces that have brought on the present so-called crisis come from the very nature of three personalities in our ranks, together with the activities of those that have been similarly placed. And of all the distasteful things to my mental make-up, a discussion of personalities is the most disgusting.

In the beginning of our history very few of our men were educated, fit to be leaders in the development of a new science; and even our students were drawn from a class that were attracted more by the "easy money" possible to be made out of those in charge of our schools, and the subject of endless discussion by the student body. Osteopathy means a science; and even our students occasionally get good results for them doesn't even ask for them to be discarded. But, to get to practice even the legitimate incidents of the profession by either closing or making their colleges medical or closing them immediately filled. Shrewd business heads saw this years ago and the "Chiro." was just what you want in the medical ranks and has cost them all the incidentals too, and they became bankrupt. The above shadowgraph showing a common case of Bunion with weakened anterior arch, is the cause of numerous painful conditions of the foot. This malady is due principally to short wide Shoes crowding the toes back and permitting the foot to broaden below the instep, from want of support.

This shadowgraph shows the deformity greatly corrected by wearing JUNG'S xxx Brace which, when properly applied assists nature in overcoming Bunion Trouble—strengthens the interossei muscles of the metatarsal by gripping the foot thus firmly supporting the anterior and longitudinal arches.
